Description: Navigator has turned out to be the surprise package of the whole bunch, 300 plus sets of plans in today's market is a lot! Navigator was designed for Boat Books Auckland's proprietor Tim Ridge as a race trainer to serve the needs of a local club!

Navigator. A really popular daysailer and cruising dinghy

John Welsford's Navigator is a 14 1/2' centerboard beach cruiser and daysailer built in glued-lapstrake plywood. Welsford offers several rigs for this pretty little boat: Bermuda racing sloop, a lug yawl, and a gaff yawl. Being attracted more to traditional boat types and rigs, I chose to build the gaff yawl.

This is where I'll post stuff on my first ever boat, a Welsford navigator sloop. My goal is a reasonably fast cruiser that we can easily trailer to interesting spots, with enough room aboard for overnight trips.

Elena, a Welsford Navigator cruising sloop

John Welsford has been quietly designing cruising dinghies, yachts and rowing boats for over 35 years. Like many good New Zealand designers he has a popular following overseas but is less well-known here. The Navigator has been one of his most popular designs with over 700 plans sold. Its popularity has also come as a pleasant surprise.

Welsford Navigator ~ Boating NZ

Navigator is prettier, but more expensive (sails and rigging). I like Houdini's sleeping platform more than the typical Navigator configuration. Navigator recovers better from a capsized, though with the sails it might be a bit harder to right.

Welsford Houdini or Navigator? - WoodenBoat

Richard, of 'Bootstrap' navigator fame, has his tholes 12" above the gunnel and slightly overboard. He says "Works well but very slow due to wide boat. Biggest issue is - where to store the oars when not in use?" So, some winter work to do - sorting out the rowing on Arwen.

Arwen's meanderings: Rowing a navigator

Navigator was designed as a race trainer to serve the needs of a local club. A crew of three teenagers was intended, with its big sloop rig and shallow draft centreboard, to reward good sailing technique in a fairly open and windy club venue.
